The Federal Army at Helena. We are in doubt as to the direction

taken by the Federal army at Helena, Ark, under Gen. Steele. The Helena correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat wrote as follows on the 5th inst. :

There are various speculations here as to the exact point against which the army of Gen. Steele is to be directed, but it may be revealed in the future that none of them are correct. There are those who proclaim that they know the orders made some time since, and that Little Rock is destined to be the next place to receive the attentions of Uncle Sam's men. There are also those who contend that the army will cross over the Missisippi, and after attacking and reducing Grenada, march through Mississippi and join the army at Memphis under General ville. Sherman. A third and very numerous class are very positive that Gen. Steele, with the entire corps d'armee and Commodore Davis's flotilla, will move by the river to Vicksburg and resume the task of opening the Mississippi by the reduction of that, the last and only stronghold of the rebels, preventing navigation from Cairo to New Orleans. I incline to the belief, with my limited knowledge of military matters, that at least the latter statement regarding the floating bridge. pamed point should, if it does not receive to-day in the direction of Winchester,
